How can we talk with our children about a sexuality?

“Preconception care” means having a correct understanding of life, the body, and sexuality. This care helps protect health, both your own and that of future generations. Regardless of whether you plan to have children in the future or not, there are many things that both women and men can do and should pay attention to.

Preconception care begins in childhood. In order for children to grow up healthy, without misunderstandings or prejudice about sexuality, what do we as adults need to know, and how can we teach them?

At this event, we will think about these topics together in a fun and engaging workshop format.

性と文化プロジェクト

With the aim of creating a happy society, this is a team that works to spread sexual and reproductive health and well-being throughout Japan.

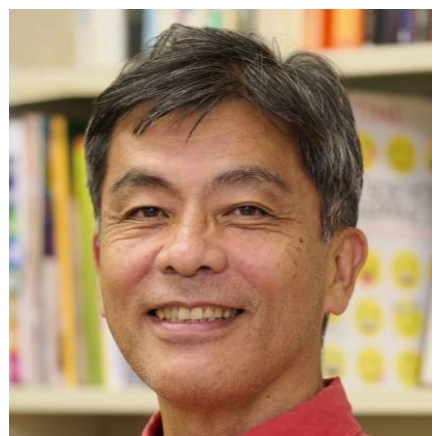

They conduct training sessions for teachers nationwide, workshops for parents, and classes at elementary schools, junior high schools, high schools, universities, and colleges.
